

Workplace Noise Assessor

Overview

This course is designed to give Occupational Health and Safety Professionals and Managers the knowledge and awareness of the risks associated with Occupational Noise and Noise Induced Hearing Loss.

It looks at the practical measures that can be taken by them to manage and minimise the noise exposure of their employees.

The course also provides the detailed knowledge and expertise required to conduct documented field risk assessments of the occupational exposure to noise within the workplace.

Who Should Attend

Occupational health and safety professionals, managers and persons of relevant job basis.

Aims

To give detailed guidance on the practical measures that can be taken to manage and minimise noise exposure of employees. To train delegates on how to conduct and document field risk assessments of the occupational exposure to Occupational Noise within the workplace.

Objectives

To allow delegates to become competent in noise measurement, analysis and risk reduction.

Content

- Terminology, symbols, quantities and abbreviations
- The measurement chain
- Use of noise meters, set-up, calibration and measurements.
- Calculation of exposure
- Measurement equipment
- Computer equipment
- Practical on-site case study
- Documentation and Recommendations
- Group Written Noise Assessments
- Written assessments
- Individual practical project

Certification

Participants should successfully complete a multiple choice assessment in order to receive the course certificate.

Number of Delegates: Suitable for up to 10 delegates.

Course Duration: 4 days to follow on from 1 day Management of Workplace Noise course.