Course Description

Acquired Brain Injuries tests a person's quality of life, self respect and independence. People who have a brain injury have to learn to live life to the full, often needing to relearn skills they had before. The Acquired Brain Injury programme will provide all health care workers with a comprehensive knowledge of brain injuries in order that they can help individuals through this process.

Brain injuries can affect individuals in various ways. This course will look at some of the common problems they experience, including reasoning, physical and emotional effects. The learner is also given "good practice" tips, realistic strategies and advice on how to work with a person who is affected by a brain injury. This includes helping a person adjust to living with a brain injury.
